RICHMOND GETS APRIL CONVENTION

Of Chamber of Commerce Executives and Sends Largest Delegation To Lexington

Richmond won the next meeting of the Chambers of Commerce organization executives for April at the meeting in Lexington Wednesday afternoon. George town sought the April meeting, but Richmond's argument that such a gathering here at a time when the local commercial organization is just "getting on its feet" met with support from the gathering and Georgetown gracefully withdrew in favor of Richmond for the April meeting.

Richmond had the honor also of having the largest attendance at the meeting of any out-of-town city, those who went over from here as delegates from the Chamber of Commerce, being, President, R. E. Turley, William O'Neil, Secretary, Lewis W. Dunbar, J. W. Hamilton, Homer W. Carpenter, R. M. Rowland, R. J. McKee, John W. Arnold and S. M. Saufley.

All had a delightful time and found this gathering of bustling business men from Blue Grass towns a most inspiring one. Other cities represented besides Lexington and Richmond were Georgetown, Paris, Danville, Lancaster, Cincinnati, Falmouth, Owingsville.

The feature of the program was an address by Lucas Wilson, of Chicago, on "Commercial Organizations in Kentucky."

A man's interest in his Chamber of Commerce, said Mr. Wilson, can be based either on an appeal to his good citizenship or to his economic sense. A man can also be interested in his Chamber of Commerce by an appeal to his enlightened selfishness, when he becomes convinced that neither he or his town can exist without the other.

All the values with which men deal are made out of or because of the character of the city. "You might ask me," said Mr. Wilson, "what interest I, from Chicago, have in Kentucky. My interest in Kentucky is based upon the theory that if Kentucky is prosperous that prosperity reacts on every other state in America. Today we are so brought together by railroads, automobiles, telegraph lines, etc., that no member of the human family can suffer without all of us bearing a share of the burden."

"If Kentucky towns want successful Chambers of Commerce they must develop a clean-cut program of work. Such a program must be founded upon a community realization that its values are based upon a willingness of men to do new things. Every time you find a man or a town which refuses to change you find a man or a town which simply cannot grow."

Real estate value is the key to nearly every other community value. It is largely thru the efforts of the individual or the activities of commercial bodies that real estate values are regular. All of the larger towns in Kentucky combined in the last ten years increased population about 36,000. One city in Virginia alone, grew that much. The normal growth of the population of the United States is about twenty per cent, every ten years. Every city should strive to get its share of this normal growth. Human beings, like water, tend to flow along established channels. In Connecticut city growth is forty times larger than it is in Kentucky. How much would it be worth to Central Kentucky towns if they could alter somewhat these established channels? If the cities of Kentucky during the next ten years could claim their just proportion of the normal increase of the nation, it would enormously increase their real estate values."

Why go and pay a big price for cheap new piano or do without, when you can go down to Green's Music Store and buy a good used piano of a standard make, with a nice case and a dandy tone. Now is your chance—we have them. Green's Music Store, near opera house, East Main.

(By Associated Press)
Frankfort, Ky., Mar. 23.—The work of selecting a site for the two new normal schools established by act of the General Assembly is not expected to be started until June 15, according to persons acquainted with the situation. Speaker James H. Thompson, of the House of Representatives, has named five members of the commission to select the sites and Lieutenant Governor Ballard will name the other three. The measure has been signed by the governor.

Cities which want the schools already have been making application for them, citizens stating that the necessary $100,000 will be provided in property or money. Among the cities which have made tentative offers are Morehead, Alton and Pikeville in Eastern Kentucky and Benton and Owensboro in the western part of the state.

The measure provides that $80,000 annually is to be paid by the state for maintenance of each of the two schools. The funds are not to be available, however, until lands or money of the value of at least $100,000 is donated.

RABBI RAUCH AT BAPTIST CHURCH

(By Associated Press)

The campaign for Jewish War Relief is going well in Madison county. Teams are being organized in the town and throughout the county so that no person may be overlooked. We thought that we had become satisfied with "war drives" but we have not yet grown callous to the cries of starving women and children. One who cannot be touched with an appeal like this must be hardened to the last degree. Let us think of the starving millions when we sit down to our tables laden with good things. What if you had not a piece of bread in your home for yourself or your children? Such is the pitiful case of many a household in the war-stricken regions.

Daugherty said since fuel is an indispensable part of transportation the government will have the same authority to act in case of interference of coal production as it would in the event of interruption of the nation's transportation system and would not have to wait until there is an actual coal shortage before the government can take action.

It was intimated the Department of Justice will have something to say a minute after midnight March 31.
